Private Jones looked at the beach. It was a complete disaster zone. The cliff had collapsed, destroying the path up from the beach, and the tide had come in. A party of schoolchildren were clinging to the rocks; they were safe but with the freezing rain, they were likely to develop hypothermia. Fortunately, he and his colleagues were on a military exercise on the cliffs above the beach. They climbed down and one-by-one helped the children and their teacher to safety.
